

Just wanted to say that in regards to Public employees names and salaries being posted on the government website. I don't feel that specific names should be there, I know that in some cases people have been teased due to how much they make or don't make. So in my opinion maybe it should be something like... this position makes this much or in this position there were "number of employees" and the salary range is "$x - $x". Another reason for this is a personal reason, what if I am out with friends for a meal and they make the comment of oh you should pay, basing their comment on that they have seen my salary at on a website. But they don't know what my home bills are, or whether my wife makes very much money or whatnot. It could potentially cause a very awkward situation. Not to mention the tension it sometimes causes at work, with everyone knowing what you make or don't make. Anyway just a thought. Thanks,
